DECISION

(Delivered by Shri S. Panchapagesa Sastry)

This is an appeal against the appellate order of the Industrial Court, Bombay, modifying an order of the Labour Court on an application by the Rashtriya Mill Mazdoor Sangh, Bombay, for withdrawal of an alleged illegal change by the Gold Mohur Mills Limited, Bombay.

2. On the 20th February 1950 the mills put up a notice to the effect that the hank dyeing department will be closed from 19th March 1950. The notice purported to be under Standing Order No. 9 of the Standing Orders for operatives. Fourteen workers were retrenched under this notice. The Rashtriya Mill Mazdoor Sangh, Bombay, took up the matter and urged that the closure and the retrenchment were illegal on several grounds. After some negotiations which proved unsuccessful, the Sangh filed an application (No. 109/1950), before the Labour Court. It prayed for a declaration that the closure of the hank dyeing department was illegal and improper and that the action of the mills was in contravention of the provisions of the Bombay Industrial Relations Act and amounted to an illegal change and that the said change should be directed to be withdrawn; the retrenched workers being reinstated and paid full compensation for loss of wages. The contentions of the Rashtriya Mill Mazdoor Sangh were (1) standing order 9 was inapplicable as this was not a case of discontinuance of a shift; (2) the Model Standing Order No. 10 sub clause (2) could not apply as there were already standing orders settled under the Bombay Industrial Disputes Act and continued in force by the Bombay Industrial Relations Act. The hank dyeing department which was closed was "neither a department nor even a section of a department" within the meaning of the standing orders; (3) in any event the matter fell within the scope of Item 1 of Schedule II of the Bombay Industrial Relations Act and hence the action of the mills in effecting a closure and consequential retrenchment without giving notice of change and following the procedure prescribed by the Act was illegal.

3. The written statement of the mills admitted that Order 9 of their Standing Orders would not apply as there was only one shift which was being closed. But the closure was justified under Model Standing Order 10 sub-clause (2). According to the mills Order No. 9 in the notice of closure was put in by mistake instead of Model Standing Order 10(2). The matter did not fall within Item 1 of Schedule II but fell within Item 4 of Schedule I. The hank dyeing department was only a section of a department. No compensation was payable as the action of the Mills was proper and legal.

4. The Labour Court held that Model Standing Order 10(2) was applicable and the closure was justified. It also found on the evidence that the hank dyeing department can be regarded as a separate department by itself, or at least as a section of one department of beam dyeing and hank dyeing and the two sections were independent. The matter in dispute came under item 4 of Schedule I and not under item 1 of Schedule II of Bombay Industrial Relations Act. On the question of compensation the Labour Court was of opinion that Badli work was offered to the employees retrenched but they did not accept it and nothing more was payable except what was contractually due. In the result the application was dismissed.

5. There was an appeal to the Industrial Court. The same contentions were pressed before that Court also. That Court upheld the finding of the lower Court that the hank dyeing department could be regarded as a separate department or an independent section of a department. There was enough evidence to support that view. Following a Full Bench decision of the Industrial Court, Model Standing Order 10(2) was held to be available in circumstances applicable to the present case. The reference to section 9 of the Standing Orders in the Notice was held to be a mistake for Model Standing Order 10(2). The closure was held to fall within item 4 of Schedule I and not within item 1 of Schedule II of the Bombay Industrial Relations Act. There was no necessity for giving a notice of change and following the prescribed procedure. The Court held that the closure and retrenchment were legal. On the question of compensation the Industrial Court was of opinion that the offer of Badli work was coupled with certain conditions which did not find favour with the majority of the retrenched workers except two. This could not stand in the way of the workers getting some reasonable compensation as the closure was not due to any fault of their own but was due to the company's desire to effect economy. It accordingly directed that an amount equivalent to the basic wages and dearness allowance at the rate existing at the time of the closure for ten days for each year of service but subject to maximum of forty days shall be paid to the workers retrenched. The present appeal is against this Order.

6. Shri Ambekar appearing for the Rashtriya Mill Mazdoor Sangh addressed a lengthy argument on the interrelation of Schedule I item 4 and Schedule II item 1 of the list in the Schedules to Bombay Industrial Relations Act. This was his main contention. He also pressed the other contentions set out above and finally he argued for larger compensation than what the Industrial Court had given.

7. According to Shri Ambekar a distinction should be made between what he calls cases of simple closure which fall under item 4 of Schedule I and other cases of closure which really fall under Item 1 or Item 4 of Schedule II. He admits that every closure involves retrenchment or reduction and in some cases it may be due to rationalisation or other efficiency system of work. His main argument is that it would be defeating the object of the Act if a wide interpretation is given to the word 'closure' in item 4 of Schedule I newly introduced into the Bombay Industrial Relations Act, as labour would be deprived of the benefit of various remedies which are conferred on it by the Act in relation to matters which fall under various items of Schedule II. He particularly stressed the right of labour in the above cases (1) to compel the management to go to Court instead of labour going to Court; (2) the right to negotiate and have conciliation by collective bargaining and (3) the right to resort to a strike. These beneficial remedies are not available in cases where a matter falls under Schedule I and not under Schedule II. On these grounds it was strenuously urged that wherever there is a closure of a department or a section of a department due to elimination of any process in manufacture which however does not eliminate the further use of the products processed in the mills, should not be regarded as closure falling under Item 4 of Schedule I but as falling under Schedule II, either item 1 and item 4 or both. This distinction sought to be made by Shri Ambekar between simple closure and other kinds of closure did not find favour with the Courts below. It is, however, unnecessary to decide this question in this case.

8. Shri Ambekar conceded that the closure of the hank dyeing department in this particular instance was a bona fide act on the part of the Mills. It was a measure of economy which the mills were properly entitled to resort to. His only complaint was that the Mills followed the wrong procedure in effecting the closure in the manner in which they did it. Under section 78(C) of the Bombay Industrial Relations Act the Labour Court has power to require any employer to withdraw any change which is held by it to be illegal. Shri Ambekar admitted that the Labour Court is not bound to direct the withdrawal of every change which it might find to be illegal and that it has a discretion in the matter. In the instant case Shri Ambekar conceded that it would not be right to pass an order of withdrawal of the change as the closure was a perfectly bona fide measure on the part of the mills as stated already. Indeed in his appeal memorandum before us the prayer for withdrawal of the change which was specifically asked for in the application and the appeal memorandum to the lower Courts is not to be found. In view of this it becomes unnecessary to decide the question whether the change was legal or illegal. The decision on this question as to the correctness of the limitation sought to be placed upon the scope of Item 4 of Schedule I as suggested by Shri Ambekar is unnecessary in this case for, whether the change was legal or illegal, it is now conceded by the Mills that the retrenched workers will have a right to reasonable compensation by way of unemployment relief in accordance with the trend of recent decisions of this Tribunal.

9. The question that remains to be decided is the measure of such compensation. The Industrial Court has given compensation at the rate of ten days' basic wages and dearness allowance for each year of service but has fixed a limit of forty days' wages. There is no appeal by the mills but labour has appealed asking for more. Shri Ambekar objects to the direction imposing the maximum rate. No particular reasons are set out in the Order of the lower Court as to this limit. Shri Narayanswamy for the Company argues that compensation by way of unemployment relief should not lightly be saddled upon the textile industry and it is recent innovation, the effect of which is likely to add very much to the costs of production. Further he suggests that employment is readily available for discharged operatives in this industry in other mills and it may safely be taken that the discharged employees will be able, within about forty days time, to secure such employment. This is how he justifies the maximum limit imposed by the Order. In the present case 14 people only are affected and many of them have put in long years of service, five or six of them having even more than 25 years or so. It seems to us that forty days limit unduly curtails the amount of reasonable compensation that should be paid. The removal of the maximum limit will not cause any appreciable financial burden on the mills. It appears from the evidence that some of the workers at least have abandoned further employment and gone to their native place. In these circumstances we do not think it proper to retain the limit as to forty days' wages as maximum. No doubt there cannot be a hard and fast rule with respect to the amount of compensation payable in such cases of closure and retrenchment. There is no gratuity scheme in force and the workers do not have any substantial benefit even under the Provident Fund scheme as it is only a very recent introduction. In our opinion the maximum limit imposed by the present Order of the Industrial Court should be removed. In the result Appeal No. 77 of 1952 is allowed to this extent viz. that the compensation shall be increased by removing the maximum limit fixed by the Order of the lower Court. In other respects the Order is upheld.

DECISION

(Delivered by Shri S. Panchapagesa Sastry)

This appeal was posted for admission. It was heard on 8th instant. We are of opinion that the appeal should be dismissed.

2. Fourteen operatives of the appellant mills were discharged by individual notices of termination of service purporting to be under standing order 22. Both the Labour Court, and the Industrial Court on appeal, have found that this was a case of retrenchment due to want of work as alleged by the company, and that accordingly action could not be taken under the standing order aforesaid, but the mills should have given notice of change and acted under the Bombay Industrial Relations Act as retrenchment, intended to be permanent or semi-permanent, would fall under item 1 of Schedule II of the Act. The workers have been directed to be reinstated and some compensation was also directed to be paid.

3. In this appeal the learned Counsel contends that this must be regarded as a case of temporary retrenchment and not retrenchment intended to be permanent or semi-permanent, and therefore Item 1 of Schedule II was inapplicable. We do not agree. It would be open to the management under the relevant standing orders to play-off some of the workmen where there is need, but in the present case it is not a case of play-off. It is a regular case of retrenchment. The company cannot get over the fact by the mere device of adding in the notices issued under the standing order 22 that the company would try its utmost to re-employ the discharged workers. We have no doubt that on the facts, as found by the Courts below, the action of the company must be held to be one of retrenchment intended to be permanent or semi-permanent and the same could not be effected by individual notices purporting to be under standing order 22. There are no merits in the appeal and it is accordingly dismissed, in limine.
